A delicate pop-up book which gradually reveals the 1942 poem written by French poet Paul Eluard during the German occupation of France. An ode to Freedom.

POETRY - RESISTANCE - COURAGE

This accordion-style book harmoniously unfolds the stanzas of Paul Eluard's poem. Delicate cutouts reveal page after page the details of a landscape. Little by little, the horizon widens, revealing a photo of resistance fighters during World War II. On my notebooks from school
On my desk and the trees
On the sand on the snow
I write your name

On every page read
On all the white sheets
Stone blood paper or ash
I write your name

On the golden images
On the soldier's weapons
On the crowns of kings
I write your name

On the jungle the desert
The nests and the bushes
On the echo of childhood
I write your name

On my ravaged refuges
On my fallen lighthouses
On the walls of my boredom
I write your name

On passionless absence
On naked solitude
On the marches of death
I write your name

On health that's regained
On danger that's past
On hope without memories
I write your name

By the power of the word
I regain my life
I was born to know you
And to name you

October 2025

At the edge of the Great Enchanted Forest, there's chaos around Father Christmas's usually quiet wooden house. This morning was meant to be the big test flight — but nothing is going to plan. The sleigh is broken, the reindeers are on strike, and Father Christmas is not feeling well...

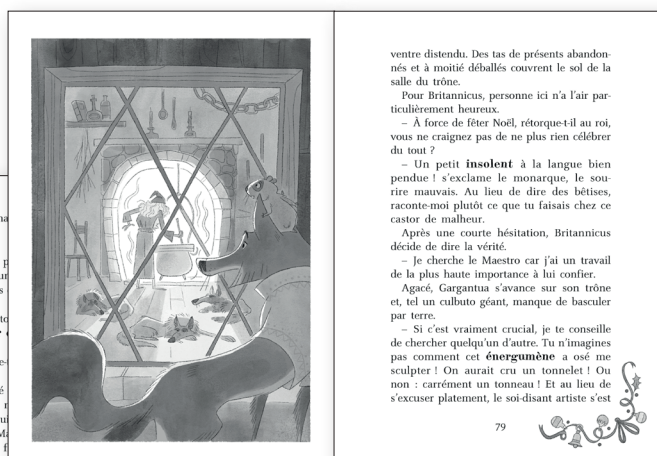

Britannicus the polar bear and Răgnar the fox, Santa's two favourites (who couldn't be more different), set off on a mission to fix everything. Along the way, they'll face a pack of grumpy wolverines, a boastful beaver, a mean gingerbread man and even the fearsome Father Whipper...

Will they manage to save Christmas?

— Je suis à la recherche d'une vieille connaissance. Un castor qui...
L'autre l'interrompt en ricanant :
— Si c'est le Maestro que tu veux, tu n'es pas le seul ! La moitié des gloutons du royaume sont à ses trousses ! Le roi offre son poids de pâte d'amande à celui qui le capturera.
Britannicus soupire : se mettre à dos te un royaume, c'est typique de ce rongeur de malheur !
— On peut savoir ce qu'il a fait ? demande-t-il en ravalant de justesse « cette fois-ci ».
— D'après les rumeurs, il aurait manqué respect à notre roi Gargantua... Si tu m'en donnes une de tes tartines, je peux te conduire jusqu'à son igloo, ce n'est pas loin d'ici. Mais tu n'y trouveras personne : le castor a filé depuis belle lurette !
— Marché conclu ! Je dénicherai sans doute des indices là-bas, déclare l'ours en sortant de son sac un gros morceau de pain pour le glouton.
Ce dernier s'en saisit à la vitesse de l'éclair et l'engloutit bruyamment, projetant alentour miettes et gouttelettes de bave.

ventre distendu. Des tas de présents abandonnés et à moitié déballés couvrent le sol de la salle du trône.
Pour Britannicus, personne ici n'a l'air particulièrement heureux.
— À force de fêter Noël, rétorque-t-il au roi, vous ne craignez pas de ne plus rien célébrer du tout ?
— Un petit insolent à la langue bien pendue ! s'exclame le monarque, le sourire mauvais. Au lieu de dire des bêtises, raconte-moi plutôt ce que tu faisais chez ce castor de malheur.
Après une courte hésitation, Britannicus décide de dire la vérité.
— Je cherche le Maestro car j'ai un travail de la plus haute importance à lui confier.
Agacé, Gargantua s'avance sur son trône et, tel un culbuto géant, manque de basculer par terre.
— Si c'est vraiment crucial, je te conseille de chercher quelqu'un d'autre. Tu n'imagines pas comment cet énergumène a osé me sculpter ! On aurait cru un tonnelet ! Ou non : carrément un tonneau ! Et au lieu de s'excuser patement, le soi-disant artiste s'est
