Belittling, ignoring, berating or kicking: bullying takes many different forms and it certainly does not only occur among children. One in eight employees (500,000 employees!) is a victim of bullying in the workplace every year, online bullying is rampant and in care homes, exclusion and mockery among residents is no exception.

It doesn't matter whether you are a student, employee or resident of a residential care center: being bullied puts you at greater risk of psychological, physical and social problems. Bullies and their so-called assistants so often ruin the lives of their victims, but also experience all kinds of negative consequences of their behavior. This book shows the different roles, situations and patterns within bullying behaviour. Through personal stories and scientific insights, bullying in all its forms is exposed.

An up-to-date book about a topic that touches everyone.

We find them fascinating and especially very scary: sharks. What not many people know is that we need sharks. They are indispensable to the survival of the seas and they continue to amaze people. For example, do you know why sharks like to swim to a cleaning station? Or that they already swam in the time before the dinosaurs and have countless superpowers?

Sophie van der Stap has been fascinated by sharks from an early age. She swam with sharks in several places and discovered that they are not dangerous, but are in danger themselves, and that they desperately need our help. In Shark Heroes she uses bizarre facts and heroic sea protectors - captains, deep-sea divers and modern mermaids - to show that sharks are the real heroes of the seas. But above all she wants to help these beautiful animals and all life in the sea.

- approx. 100 million sharks are killed annually
- many shark species are endangered species

BACK TO THE PLASTIC AGE

All About a Soupy Mess & Young Heroes

September 2022

Plastic Soup Foundation

How do we explain this to our children? That we have a very big bubble wrap problem. Not a nice message, stupid story. But we're going to tell you anyway.

The Plastic Soup Foundation introduced themselves to this quest and take children to the distant future, where the plastic problem has long been a thing of the past.

An archaeologist tells his neighbor children about the plastic age, the time in which we now live. With the help of colorful finds you learn with amazement and pleasure (yes, really) about the story behind plastic. And there is hope! The book takes you around the world and tells about young heroes who have risen up to tackle the plastic problem. You learn what they have done to make the world a bit more beautiful and healthier.
