After the teachers of the Gutenberg School have realised that it was not a good idea to put the worst class in the world next to the teachers' room, the little rascals have to move without further ado, first to an adjoining building in the garden and finally even to a free classroom of the neighbouring Kellerwald High School. In addition, Karl-Sebastian von Bloch joins the 5a class in the middle of the school year. Perhaps the chaotic students will be inspired by the supposed model pupil?

School cat Bürste knows immediately that this will backfire. But of course, once again no one listens to a cat.

Gods are almighty? Far from it! Here comes Tessa Jones, queen of disasters and protector of the gods.

Tessa Jones, has been admonished many times in her life to behave herself. Why does she find this so difficult? Tessa finds out that she is a descended from the Amazons, the warrior women of Greek mythology. They now act as bodyguards for young goddesses. A task that doesn't suit Tessa at all – especially since not only the beautiful Helena, whom Zeus, the father of the gods, unceremoniously forces upon her, deviates from the script. Hades has also had enough of the underworld, which he has ruled for millennia.

Tessa realises almost too late that Helena, of all people, plays an important role in his plan to usurp Zeus' power, and suddenly not only Helena's fate, but that of the whole world is in her hands.
