LEADERSHIP PRINCIPLES
GARNERED FROM REAL CONFLICTS

‘When I look at the rising rate of mental health issues, stress and burnout in people around us, there is only one thing we need to do more: feel.’

Sander Aarts

The Courage to Lead

SANDER AARTS

The Seven Qualities of the Present-Day Leader

Our society needs new leaders. The days of dominant CEOs and all-knowing managers are over. We want leaders who can lead their teams through the storm, who are compassionate, yet can make tough decisions. Leaders who can follow, but who can also guide their team to the peak and then safely back to base camp. Don't make the mistake of thinking that leadership is solely the domain of highly placed businessmen or women, members of the Special Forces or army generals. Leadership is not an innate talent: it is a choice. The choice to take full control of your own life, to examine your past and your behavior patterns, to take ownership of your life, and in so doing, to inspire others. It doesn't matter whether you're a team leader in the Special Forces, a supermarket manager, or still in school. Leadership can be learned. Sander Aarts worked for the Special Forces for sixteen years in a variety of senior positions. In The Courage to Lead he discusses the seven qualities every good leader must have in his or her repertoire. Expect no theoretical models or run-of-the-mill self-help wisdoms, but practical advice, insights and knowledge garnered from real conflicts. You will learn how to take control of your life, how to become an example to those around you and pave the way for a new generation of leaders.

© FRANK RUTTER

SANDER AARTS is one of the few to have completed the toughest military training in the Netherlands. He served for sixteen years with the Special Forces of the Netherlands Marine Corps. He was also an instructor in the popular television series Special Forces VIPs. His many skills and various positions as a team leader and commander during major missions led him to develop his own leadership style in the field. He is also the author of Unbreakable and Mission Mindset.

A Musical Tour of Italy

O sole mio and La donna è mobile, singing gondoliers and Verdi’s operas. Italy is music, and music is Italy. Why are they so connected, Miriam Bunnik wondered. She begins an investigation and ends up in Arezzo, where a monk named Guido invented musical notation in the eleventh century. In Florence, she visits the new opera house, where she learns about the origins of opera. She goes to Cremona, where she talks with a violin maker about his fellow townsman Stradivarius, to Naples to find out the fascinating history of the conservatory. But she also seeks out the famous Italo disco artist Ryan Paris in Ostia, takes a tour of the Lucio Dalla Museum and feasts her eyes on a folk music festival in the Salento. Vivaldi and Volare is a journey through Italy and an exploration of music history!

UPDATED VERSION

‘Poignant and well-written.’

NEDERLANDS DAGBLAD

Based on his own experience, Yoram Stein explains how you can quit smoking marijuana, what the pitfalls are and how to avoid a relapse. A must for anyone struggling with addiction of any kind.

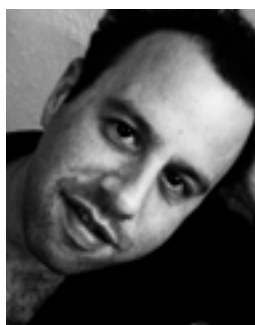

How to Stop Smoking Marijuana

YORAM STEIN

The Myths, The Dangers and Your Final Joint

Kicking an addiction, according to this book, is one of the most difficult and drastic decisions in your life. But it’s still possible – and worth it – to kick your habit once and for all. The ten steps described in How to Stop Smoking Marijuana will help you along. This clear and proven method is based on the experiences of ex-addicts. How to Stop Smoking Marijuana also picks apart the myth of the harmless joint and calls for radical drug policy reform. Because as long as society keeps saying ‘it’s only a joint’, schoolchildren will be easily tempted to light their first one, and it will be all the more difficult for addicts to extinguish their last.

The Biography

Peter Pontiac was one of the Netherlands’ most admired comics creators and illustrators. He also received international praise for his dynamic artwork and the force of his narratives. He was one of the first Dutch comics creators to incorporate sex, drugs and rock ’n’ roll in his artwork. Pontiac published his work in comics magazines but also in Vrij Nederland, Oor, Rolling Stone and NRC. Peter Pontiac quit drugs, and went on to become a father and a renowned illustrator. He published Kraut, the first European biographical comic, about his domineering father who had killed himself. The book was awarded the Professor Pi and the Marten Toonder prizes. In 2011, Pontiac succumbed to hepatitis C, for which there was no treatment at the time. He incorporated his final days into a book about death, the posthumously published Styx, or: final stage fright.

HUIB MODDERKOLK

The Secret World Behind Your Screen

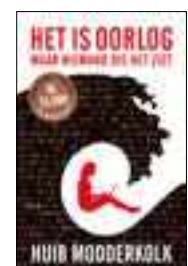

'I'd rather not know this', is a remark investigative journalist Huib Modderkolk often hears when he talks about the dangers of modern technology. He gets the same reaction from companies and the government. When he himself becomes the subject of an inquiry, Modderkolk discovers the consequences of this naive attitude. His ensuing investigation brings him into contact with people who work to expose the internet as a dangerous weapon, sometimes at the risk of their own lives. From Saint Petersburg to Teheran, he hears terrifying stories that are usually kept secret. This leads him to find out where our most intimate information ends up, why the Netherlands implemented a dubious detection system and to what extent China has infiltrated safety-critical systems. You Don't Want to Know This, like Modderkolk's highly praised bestseller There's a War Going on But No One Can See It, is a bloodcurdling page-turner about the dark side of the digital world.

A Pamphlet

Young women today are faced with a paradox. They want to build a career but also raise a family. They don’t want influencers to make them feel insecure but are worried about starting Botox treatments too late. The capitalist system shamelessly exploits the inequality between men and women. The norm is for men to work outside the house, while parenting is still seen as women’s ‘natural’ role. Women live in a world with increasing wellness yet diminishing autonomy and interaction. Based on her personal experiences, Doortje Smithuijsen looks at how seemingly harmless phenomena such as mom vloggers in fact belong to a system that constantly marginalizes women. With her keen perception she demonstrates how difficult it is for women to choose freely within this system.

in the era of climate change

The hottest years of our lives lie ahead of us. With such a frightening prospect, it’s no wonder we all suffer from climate change denial at times. Powerlessness prevails. What is the point of worrying? What difference can you possibly make?

In Everyday Activism, climate change philosopher Chris Julien takes us beyond the discomfort of a problem that feels too complex and too massive to solve. Drawing on scientific, philosophical and personal insights, he shows how we can act towards systemic change in our everyday lives. And he focuses on how one person can make a difference, whether it’s on the highway, in the conference room or in the sports canteen.

JORINDE BENNER

How to mix and match two families under the same roof

More than one in three relationships with children breaks down these days. Many parents go on to form new families, with stepchildren, step-grandparents, step-pets and all. What should you pay attention to when forming a blended family? What is the recipe for success? Journalist Jorinde Benner speaks from personal experience and talks to stepfamilies and experts in her search for answers to the questions that (future) blended families may struggle with. ‘With a wink’ also talks to experts like lawyers and mediators who know the dos and don’ts of the blended family like no other. With a hefty dose of humor and a skillful pen, she explains how you should introduce a new lover, how to deal with ex-partners and what to do if your stepchild doesn’t like you. Recognizable, giving a sense of perspective and inspiring: this is how to make your blended family a success.

- How and when do you introduce a new partner?
- How do you agree on things when moving in together?
- Who is in charge of parenting?
- How do you deal with ex-partners?
- What do you do if your stepchild doesn’t like you?

How to help your child – a practical guide, written by two experts

Vaping may seem harmless, but it certainly is not. A vape is addictive and often contains even more nicotine than an entire pack of cigarettes. Vaping also disrupts brain development in teens and young adults, with the potential for permanent damage and mental problems. What can you do as a parent? How can you be sure your child is not secretly vaping? And what do you do if vaping becomes an addiction? In this practical book, two doctors share everything you need to know about the e-cigarette. They also offer a clear step-by-step plan so you can help your child quit vaping.

ADWIN DE KLUYVER

Islands as a Microcosm, The Ideal Location for Natural Science and Social Experiments

An island is a microcosm. It is the ideal place for establishing a utopian society, or for testing grandiose ideas or whims. In The Islands of Good and Evil Adwin de Kluyver demonstrates how for centuries man has used islands as sites for natural science and social experiments. In an absorbing blend of travel narrative, history and reference book, De Kluyver tells us about philosophers and visionaries, scientists and frauds, and about dreamers who became achievers. He takes us to islands of scientific, political and cultural significance: from Aristotle's ecological research on Lesbos to Wernher von Braun's rocket tests on Usedom. The Islands of Good and Evil is a gripping and moving voyage around the world, from the Galápagos Islands to Rottumerplaat, replete with vistas, and reflections on the past and the future. Adventurous, breathtaking and sometimes even mystifying.

I Did My Own Research

ADRIAAN TER BRAACK

Your Guide through the Jungle of Pseudoscience

‘Do your own research!’ This may seem to be the yellow brick road to the truth, but amateur research all too often leads to erroneous conclusions, alternative realities and laughable pseudoscience. Why are people so keen on playing the role of doctor, and why is pseudoscience so rampant online? What are the most common fallacies, how can you identify pseudoscience, and why is YouTube an unreliable source? And finally, how can you prevent yourself from falling prey to misinformation? This book is an account of science journalist Adriaan ter Braack’s research into all these questions. Providing many everyday examples, he condemns the spreading of misinformation full of his typical wit and humour.

Learn to negotiate effectively, lessons from a hostage negotiator and a police officer

Negotiating With Toddlers and Criminals

HEIDI NIEBOER &
MARJOLEIN SMIT-ARNOLD BIK

Six Techniques to Improve Your Negotiation Skills at Home and at Work

How does a hostage negotiator convince a hostage taker to come out, when that person knows he will then be arrested? How do some people manage to haggle €1000 off the price of a new car while others are even charged for the key ring? How does one child succeed in convincing his parents to let him stay up till midnight while his brother – at the same age – doesn't? And how do you reach a family consensus about the next holiday destination? Of course, personality, circumstances or luck can play an important role, but certain techniques can also be decisive when negotiating. You can learn these techniques using six principles. Being able to negotiate effectively is a skill that can help you feel secure when starting a difficult, important or even intimidating conversation. The essence of negotiation is understanding the other and using that understanding to reach the best result.

Not only for yourself, but also for the person sitting opposite you. Because the moment you realize that negotiations don't necessarily have to end with a winner and a loser, everything will become much easier!

HEIDI NIEBOER was a former senior officer, hostage negotiator and instructor in the police. She decided to apply the skills she'd learned in these positions in everyday life and now works as an instructor and a coach and gives workshops in the Netherlands and abroad.

MARJOLEIN SMIT-ARNOLD BIK is a senior police officer. She has much experience as a team and department leader but also as a general commander during public events, crises and criminal investigations. She volunteers as a mediator and a neighborhood moderator, facilitating difficult discussions.

JEROEN SIEBELINK

The Radical, International Activism of Animal Liberators

Our degree of civilization can be gauged by how we treat animals. 'Have we not yet reached that level of civilization? Then we must dare to walk on the grass,' Karl Marx said. Which means not giving a damn about the rules and breaking unjust laws. In the past, illegal actions have contributed to the emancipation of laborers and women and to combatting climate change. But whereas climate activists are mostly concerned with securing our future, animal liberators are battling against immeasurable suffering happening here and now. The Animal Liberators is the captivating history of a radical, international movement that originated and is still active in the Netherlands. What is their modus operandi? Do they really help animals? And how far are you allowed to go? Shouldn't all actions be strictly peaceful to ensure positive public opinion? And do they have a future now that political parties and legitimate animal organisations are voicing their own concerns? This book is an extraordinary mix of history, analysis and poignant observations of what motivates animal liberators.

Racing with a smile

For years, the cheerful Daniel Ricciardo was seen as a future world champion. Until he shocked the Formula 1 world in 2018 by announcing his departure from Red Bull. While former teammate Max Verstappen racked up successes at his old team, Ricciardo's star faded at Renault and later McLaren. In 2023, he returned to Red Bull as a test driver, replacing Nyck de Vries mid-season in the B-team AlphaTauri, which will continue under the name RB from the 2024 season. This is intended to be a springboard to the main team, where Daniel Ricciardo wants to become Verstappen's teammate again sooner rather than later. In this book, F1 journalist Noël Ummels delves into the many highs and lows of Ricciardo's racing career. From his early years in karting to his debut in Formula 1, from his breakthrough at Red Bull to the disappointing years that followed, with all the mental ups and downs that came with it. We also read about his rivalries with the likes of Max Verstappen, Lewis Hamilton, Lando Norris, and Sergio Pérez. And in between, Ummels reflects on the developments in Formula 1 that have influenced Ricciardo's career.

CHRISTIAAN KUYVENHOVEN

‘Who hasn’t imagined themselves conducting along with a recording of classical music?’

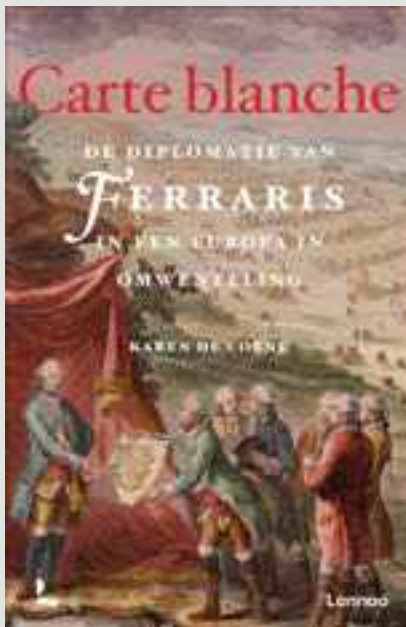

Pa-pa-pa-paaa... As a twelve-year-old boy, Christiaan first hears the ominous Fifth Symphony by Gustav Mahler. The piece fascinates him. The thunder of the drums! The stately steps of the trumpet! On the record cover, he finds a man in a tailcoat, standing with his back to the audience, holding a baton. Young Christiaan imitates him for hours on end, with his grandmother’s knitting needle at the ready, until he can make the violins cry on command – bravo for the maestro with the knitting needle! Twenty-five years later, Christiaan is a celebrated concert pianist and presenter. But his fascination with the baton persists. In The Maestro with the Knitting Needle, he traverses centuries of music history. He takes you on a journey through Europe, accompanied by the great orchestra conductors of the past and present. An adventure not to be missed for anyone who cherishes music.

KAREN DE COENE

Ferraris' diplomacy in a Europe in flux

In the turbulent Europe of the 18th century, Ferraris grew up from child soldier to secret councilman. Throughout his life, he performed a balancing act between service and personal gain. He thrived among the high nobility of the Viennese court, juggled the whims of aristocrats, was in good standing with the Austrian empress and would become a confidant of Prince Charles of Lorraine and Joseph II.

The decorated soldier traveled back and forth between Vienna and Brussels, becoming the man of choice to create a map of the Austrian Netherlands: the Ferraris map. He sent his artillerymen out to map every town, village and hamlet of these regions. With his map, he wanted to convince the Viennese court to keep the Netherlands under the crown. It was the first map to depict this part of Western Europe in large scale and detail. A map that later served him well in the first Belgian revolution, the Brabant Revolution, which started with the support of his in-laws.

KAREN DE COENE is an independent researcher and art historian. She holds a doctorate in medieval cosmology and has worked as a researcher in historical cartography and as an expert on ancient maps. For more than a decade, she searched archives across Europe to bring the enigmatic Ferraris out of the mists of history.

HARMEN VAN LIEMT

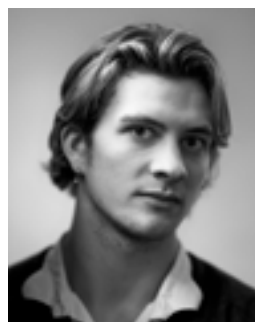

A Deeply Moving and Disarming Coming-of-Age Novel

Woody grows up as the youngest of three in a loving family in a village on the river IJssel. He is a free and uninhibited child. Woody has a close bond with his sister Lara that is difficult to explain to others.

As Woody grows older, his boldness gives way to an oppressive self-consciousness. Much of what makes him who he is loses its automaticity: his imagination, his sexuality and his relationship with the outside world. When his sister becomes very ill, Woody is forced to remain in the background. He must act like an adult overnight, but is left with unanswered questions and adolescent passion.

Harmen van Liemt wrote a remarkably powerful, raw and disarming coming-of-age novel about imagination and loss, about the desire to be seen and known, to be naturally one with the other while remaining true to yourself.

Detective Roelant Onderwater has turned his back on the criminal scene for good. From now on he will only take on white-collar cases, as promised to his partner Zorah. But it turns out to be harder than he'd expected. When he gets a call from Ko, a drug dealer to whom he owes a favor, saying no is not an option. Ko's daughter has been kidnapped, and her life, and that of four other children are now in danger. Roelant sinks his teeth into the case but decides to keep Zorah out of it. For two years, Zorah Thijssen has been dealing with the repercussions of the case on which she met Roelant, but which has also destroyed her career and the future she'd dreamed for herself. When the kidnapped girl's parents ask for her help, she gratefully jumps at the offer. Without a moment's hesitation she digs into the case, risking more than she initially realizes. A race against the clock begins with a ruthless, invisible enemy and the lives of five innocent children at stake.

FLORIS KLEIJNE is an experienced thriller writer. His work has appeared in Veronica Magazine and various publications in the US, England and Australia. MIREILLE VERSTEEG

A bestselling author and his fan stuck together in art ... and love?

Your idol usually disappoints in real life, as Eva discovers in a painful way. Or actually, their meeting is mostly painful for Max Mulder, author of international bestsellers. Due to Eva’s clumsiness, he breaks his hand, jeopardizing the deadline for his new book and even risking missing out on a major international film deal.

Under pressure from his literary agent, Eva temporarily moves in with Max to help him. Eva has to get used to the quiet of the cottage in the forest where the grumpy Max has retreated. Luckily the people in the village are much friendlier. Max struggles with the sudden presence of a roommate and his dependency on her, especially when Eva starts interfering with the contents of his book.

Both are eagerly anticipating the day when their unusual collaboration will come to an end. But the more time they reluctantly spend in each other’s company, the more an undeniable attraction starts to grow between them. As the deadline approaches, it becomes increasingly difficult for Eva and Max to resist their budding feelings.

Will they discover that love can sometimes be found in the most unexpected place and with the most unexpected person?

Brother, Murderer

ELLEN HEIJMERIKX

Powerful narrative about family, religion and violence

When her terminally ill brother calls from Belize to ask whether she would join him for his final days, Ellen must decide. She knows that he has much to answer for, recently even having murdered armed burglars. But her loyalty prevails over her aversion, and she books the trip. Ellen and her brother both grew up in a sectarian fraternity, the Brunstad Christian Church. Both of them have left the sect. This intensified their connection intense. In Brother, Murderer we follow her brother in his early days in Belize, how he tried to build a new life and how he became involved in crime. And we follow Ellen, who looks after her dying brother and tries to find an answer to the question: as we experienced the same violent indoctrination in our childhood, and my brother is capable of murder, what does that say about me?

GERDA BLEES

A swirling mosaic of fact, fiction and reflection by one of the most exceptional novelists of her generation

Oct. 4, 1992. In a hospital in Maastricht, a woman is preparing for the birth of her first child. In Amsterdam-West, an artist waits for his Japanese lover. And in Amsterdam-Zuidoost, seven-year-old Gerda Blees is sitting at the table when she hears a plane fly low over her house. A tree in the Bijlmermeer sees the plane flying toward an apartment building where a mother of four is just putting something to drink on the table, while her downstairs neighbor hands out Happy Meals to her children. She meets people who lived through the disaster from a distance, but also goes in search of her former babysitter, who narrowly escaped the flames, and her babysitter’s downstairs neighbor, who lost three children. In The Windows, Gerda Blees travels back in time to one of the most influential events of her youth: the Bijlmer plane crash. A swirling mosaic of fact, fiction and reflection, written by one of the most exceptional novelists of her generation.

GERDA BLEES made her debut with the short story collection We Didn’t Think of Dying and then published the poetry collection Dwelling Lights, nominated for the C. Buddingh’ Prize. In 2020, she published her debut novel We Are Light, which was awarded the Book Trade Prize, the European Union Prize for Literature and nominated for the Libris Literature Prize.

The translation rights to her novel have been sold to nine countries and more than 30,000 copies have already been sold in the Netherlands.
