Rewild the World at Bedtime

- This gorgeously illustrated, soothing treasury tells the true stories of how animals are healing our earth. Each story tells the tale of a real life rewilding or reintroduction story which has started the process of healing a particular environment or ecosystem around the world. Not only will each story have rich gorgeous pictures to accompany them, children will be calmed and reassured to hear how, when given the room to thrive, mother nature is wise beyond our wildest dreams and can begin to heal herself, if only we will let her.
- Each story can be read at bedtime, or aloud in class as the start to a topic about ecosystems, different climates, natural history or conservation. Rewilding is an under-published but growing topic for children, and a key part of the global strategy for conservation and tackling climate change.

Volcano Atlas

ETNA

This giant volcano looms high above the island of Sicily in the far south of Italy. It sits above the place where the African and Eurasian plates meet, deep beneath the Mediterranean Sea. Etna, which means "furnace" in the ancient Phoenician language, has been erupting every few years for centuries. Even so there are two cities - Catania and Messina - to the north and south of the volcano. Scientists at the Etna Observatory watch for eruptions. The mountain normally produces slow-moving lava, and if it looks like the flows are heading toward a town, the experts create barriers and dig artificial channels to divert it somewhere safe.

NAME: ETNA
COUNTRY: ITALY
TYPE: STRATOVOLCANO
HEIGHT: 3327 M (10914 FT)
LAST ERUPTION: 2022
NUMBER OF KNOWN ERUPTIONS: 146
BIGGEST ERUPTION: 1500 BCE
PEOPLE LIVING WITHIN 30 KM: 1 MILLION
CLAIM TO FAME: MOST ACTIVE VOLCANO IN EUROPE

ETNA IN ACTION

There has been volcanic activity in this region for about 500,000 years, and much of the eastern coast of Sicily was created by volcanic eruptions. About 8,000 years ago, a large part of Etna's eastern slope fell into the sea and caused a tsunami. The volcano's height is always changing as new eruptions add more lava to the summit. However, these new rock formations can also collapse or be pushed away by the next eruption, so Etna is actually a little shorter now than it was in the 19th century. The mountain is also on the move, shifting about 1 cm (0.4 in) towards the sea each year, as the upper rocks slide down a deeper sloping layer.

MONSTER'S LAIR

According to Greek mythology, Zeus, the king of the gods, imprisoned the monstrous flying snake Typhon under the mountain after a battle for control of the universe. Fire-breathing Typhon has been trying to escape ever since, and that causes the volcanic eruptions and earthquakes.

VULCANUS

Another of the Aeolian islands is called Vulcano, site of a small volcano about 900 m (2940 ft) high which last erupted in 2021. The name of this volcano is where we get our modern word "volcano". The mountain is named after Vulcan, the Roman god of fire. According to Roman mythology, the mountain was a chimney for the forge deep underground where Vulcan worked as a blacksmith for the gods.

STROMBOLI

North of Sicily are the volcanic Aeolian islands, named for the Greek god of the wind. There are several volcanoes on the islands, all sitting above the same plate boundary as Etna. Most of the volcanoes are dormant, but the island of Stromboli is highly active. There have been small eruptions of ash, gases, and chunks of hot rocks there almost every day for at least the last 2,000 years! Because its constant eruptions can be seen from far away, it is nicknamed "the lighthouse of the Mediterranean".

The lady appeared again the next day and held out her hands for Betushka to give her as a dowry, but Betushka shook her head sadly. "I cannot dowry today for I need to help up with my spinster." The mother told Betushka not to worry and the lady started to sing. Betushka couldn't resist the melody and together they danced.

At the next dawn, they finally stopped and Betushka was full of happiness and she remembered her simple spinster, leaving her mother. Her mother took the wooden spindle and by some magic the tree was transformed into a great of perfect big tree trunk. "Oh thank you!" Betushka cried and she stopped here.

The following morning the lady was at the green waiting for her, the girl opened another golden ring dancing among the trees. At the end of the day the lady again offered the spindle with dowry. "How can I ever thank you?" Betushka asked. "It is I who must thank you for dancing so joyfully with me!" The lady replied. "I have got something to give back to you my girl. How go home to your mother."

When Betushka returned home and her mother saw her glowing cheeks she asked her what had happened. Her mother's eyes widened as she told her tale. "What luck you have danced with the Wood Maiden!" She cried. Betushka showed her the spindle of fine thread and as they regarded it they realized it would never run out. How they had lost the bit of the basket, and made they found a pile of birch leaves bound to gold. Betushka and her mother cried with happiness, for they knew that they would never go hungry again. Betushka's mother hugged her daughter in light, proud in the knowledge that only those with the purest heart get to dance with the Wood Maiden.

The damp, dark depths of woodlands encourage the growth of fungi, lichen and moss. The fascinating look and texture of these ancient organisms has inspired many folk tales to explain their origin.

As legend, it was said that the forest danced within the depths of fungi, and beautiful colors as a result of the forest being made alive and real.

Thimbleweed has a habit of growing in circles. In folklore sometimes these sometimes are known as 'witches' rings, to because they are common's ring and in English folklore they are called fairy rings.

Long moss is a leafy lichen with long, shaggy fronds. Before humans, Chinese people call it 'fairy's beard', or 'fairy's beard'.

Staghorn moss grows in long, pendulous, and has long, thin, branching, and is very soft and spongy. It is very soft and spongy. It is very soft and spongy. It is very soft and spongy.

It is just legend that the forest was an old man with long hair and a beard. He was said to be very old and his hair was long and his beard was long and his hair was long and his beard was long.

Step Into My Power

Do you ever struggle with making decisions? The good news is that we come equipped with a compass that tells us what to do: our gut. Like all animals, we humans use our instincts to cope with changes, determine direction, protect ourselves, and survive. Our internal GPS is a navigation tool that our ancestors have relied on for centuries. While reason and critical thinking are important and should inform our actions, we're often taught to ignore the power of our intuition, which is often commonly referred to as "trusting your gut" and "following your heart."

While gut feelings aren't fail-safe and can be confused by bias, genuine mistakes, and hasty judgments, they can help us deepen our awareness about our surroundings, improve with time and experience, and provide valuable knowledge through lessons learned in the past. Although our guts can't speak to us in English, they communicate in another native tongue: through nerve signals to our brains and our tummies.

Our instinct is our inner voice and it is important to pay attention whether it whispers or it roars. As someone who considers herself a highly sensitive person, I always bristled at the limitations of the quip "feelings are not facts." Although I have logical evidence, we often just 'know' when things are wrong because our bodies tell us so.

Have you ever seen someone trying to copy off of your paper in school and it made your stomach hurt? Or have you ever felt uncomfortable because you have been asked to keep a secret that you know could get you or someone else in trouble? Do you ever feel like you don't want to hug a stranger even if you're being encouraged to do so? The sly "uh-oh" reactions you might feel in your body and mind are signals that something is off.

OUR BODIES POSSESS A WISDOM THAT CAN HELP GUIDE US, HEAL US, AND PROTECT OURSELVES. TUNE IN AND LISTEN.

This Book Will Save the Planet

- In the third title in the NYT #1 best-selling 'Empower the Future' series, activist Diandra Marizet argues for an intersectional approach to the climate crisis that does not leave anyone behind. The planet is not protected if all its inhabitants are not; the people are not protected if the planet they inhabit is not.
- Our planet is in crisis. Scientists estimate that we are on track for a rise of at least 2 degrees Celsius by the end of this century. If action is not taken, it could be as high as 4 degrees. The ice caps are melting, sea levels are rising, wildfires are raging... and yet our governments are still not taking the action we need to reverse global warming.

FAMOUS FOOD

One of the best parts about travelling to countries you've never visited before is trying out delicious and surprising foods. Some dishes are so loved by the people of a country that they have become a part of the national identity. Many are well-loved and enjoyed around the world too. A sense of pride, tradition and special occasion makes a national dish in many parts of the world. Match the food to the country it belongs to.

Can you match the different foods below to the correct country? Follow the example from the first one and a link line belongs to each country.

There is a whole museum dedicated to watermelon in this country.		CANADA
These crispy spring onion pancakes can be topped with seafood - delicious!		KOREA
This famous cheese is named after the town it comes from.		CHINA
Creamy cheese cakes, fish-givers and chips make this a Quebecois classic.		FRANCE

DESIGN YOUR OWN MENU

If you could design your own world menu, what would be on it? Draw pictures of the yummy things you would include in the menu below. If you need inspiration, take a look at the picture bank of foods below and invent some delicious dishes of your own.
