That Was Genius

written by Emily Dodd illustrated by Christian Gralinger

- History reimagined: This is a totally fresh way into perennial ancient history topics, from the Romans to the Egyptians and beyond, by looking at their technological innovations and the science behind them.
- Two in one: As well as the new angle on well-trodden history, science panels make clear how the inventions and artefacts link to modern STEM topics, introducing readers in bitesize fashion to ripped-from-the-headlines fields such as A.I., renewable energy and robotics.
- Diverse stories: The innovations and knowhow of global indigenous peoples will be included, from mapmakers in Australia to obsidian toolmakers in Africa. A mix of female and male inventors will be profiled, emphasising how their inventions have laid the ground for – or even continue to elude – modern science.

That Crystal Vibe – Gen Z version

written by Mandi Em illustrated by Celia Agnes

- That Crystal Vibe is straight-up main character energy. It's the ultimate crystal starter pack for Gen Z baddies who wanna vibe higher, protect their peace, and glow up spiritually — without the cringe.
- Let's get crystal clear, you will learn what crystals can and can't do, how to source them with good karma, and which ones are your ride-or-die for starting your magical journey. Whether you're manifesting confidence, vibing with mental wellness, or peeking into the future with a lil' divination, we got you! ✨
- It's giving healing era and ethical flex: showing how to source crystals without the guilt, calling out shady crystal myths, while showing teens how to manifest good vibes, set boundaries, and look cute doing it.
- 🌈 44% of Gen Z are already into crystals — this book speaks their language, period. (<https://religionnews.com/2023/01/23/for-gen-z-crystals-embed-spirituality-in-the-planet>)

That Crystal Vibe

written by Mandi Em illustrated by Celia Agnes

- Gap in the market: In one 2022 survey*, 44% of people aged 13-25 engaged with crystals as a spiritual exercise. That Crystal Vibe brings an ascendant hobby to a mostly untapped audience, making crystal spirituality accessible to the young people who are engaging with it most.
- * <https://religionnews.com/2023/01/23/for-gen-z-crystals-embed-spirituality-in-the-planet>
- Crystal clear conscience: Many crystal books ignore the often obscure and environmentally damaging crystal industry. That Crystal Vibe will confront this and give tips on how and why to ensure your crystals are not the product of an ethically dubious supply chain, which chimes precisely with the values and concerns of Gen Z.
- Spirit guide: Chapters on the basics of crystal identification and usage, as well as astrology, crafts, mindful practices, and advice for ethical sourcing, are complete with magical illustrations from an artist with ~22,000 followers on Instagram – exactly the place where, according to the survey above, Gen Z are getting their crystal fix.

Little Tree and The Wood Wide Web

written by Lucy Brownridge and illustrated by Hannah Abo

- Have you ever wondered if trees can communicate with each other? Well, they can! Recently, scientists have discovered that forests communicate via underground networks of fungal threads known as 'the wood wide web'.
- In this picture book, we meet a little fir tree sapling who is very lonely, and can't reach any light or water. Her worried feeling sinks down to the tips of her roots, which little does she know, are connected to the wood wide web. The fungal network sends her message all over the forest! "little tree needs help!"
- This is a powerful book, that teaches children about a hugely important discovery in contemporary science, and most importantly, about the strength that comes with asking for help, and discovering that you are not alone.

When We Went Wild

written by Isabella Tree and illustrated by Allira Tee

- Nancy and Jake are farmers. They raise their cows and pigs, and grow their crops. They use a lot of big machines to help them and spray a lot of chemicals to get rid of the weeds and the pests. That's what all good farmers do, isn't it? And yet, there is no wildlife living on their farm. The animals look sad. Even the trees look sad! One day, Nancy has an idea... what if they stopped using all the machines, and all the chemicals, and instead they went wild?
- From the best-selling author and rewilding pioneer Isabella Tree, When We Went Wild is a heartwarming, sustainably printed picture book about the benefits of letting nature take the lead, inspired by real-life rewilding projects.

007 CAN YOU IDENTIFY GARDEN PRODUCERS AND CONSUMERS?

Every garden ecosystem supports a lively food web with producers, consumers, and decomposers. Garden soil hosts microscopic bacteria, fungi, worms, and other microorganisms that assist in decomposing waste and other organic matter. All producers, plants in a garden feed a variety of consumers such as insects and their larvae, small mammals, and birds that feed on their seeds. These small organisms are then eaten by larger mammals, reptiles, and birds.

Make a chart with producers on one side and consumers on the other. Then, add a garden space, and write down or draw pictures of all the producers and consumers you see.

producers	consumers

Let's Explore!
Find a garden food chain in nature. ... maybe it may contain a bug, a bird, and a seed, or a rabbit munching on leaves. Try to identify a producer, consumer, and decomposer in your garden.

008 CAN YOU LABEL THE LIVING AND NONLIVING THINGS IN THE GARDEN?

Both living (biotic) and nonliving (abiotic) things are important to any ecosystem. In a garden, biotic factors might include plants, worms, insects, reptiles, spiders, and birds. Soil, water, sunlight, air, and rocks are some examples of abiotic factors.

Color the scene below and label all the biotic and abiotic factors you can identify in the garden ecosystem.

Challenge! Choose the best answer for the following multiple choice questions.

- Living things in a garden ecosystem, such as plants, microbes, and insects, are called:
 - biotic
 - abiotic
 - ecosystem
 - environmental
- Which of these is an example of an abiotic factor in the garden ecosystem?
 - sunlight
 - insects
 - birds
 - plants
- Both living and nonliving things are important parts of an:
 - factor
 - organism
 - ecosystem
 - food chain

027 WHERE DO NUTRIENTS IN THE SOIL COME FROM?

Like all living things, plants need nutrients to survive. Plants absorb most of the key nutrients that help them grow and develop from the soil.

When a plant reaches the end of its life cycle, the nutrients inside it are broken down and returned to the soil by microbes, worms, and other invertebrates. These nutrients are then absorbed by a plant's roots, completing the nutrient cycle.

Based on the text above, label the diagram with stages in the nutrient cycle.

Challenge! Scoop some soil from your garden, and place a small amount of it on a plate or tray. Use a pocket microscope to get an up-close look at the soil particles and any invertebrates living in the soil.

028 WHAT NUTRIENTS ARE ESSENTIAL TO PLANTS?

The essential nutrients required for plants are broadly categorized as macronutrients (needed in large amounts) and micronutrients (needed in small amounts).

Color each of the nutrients in the diagram below according to the key.

Non-renewable Nutrients
Macronutrients from water & air - blue
Primary Macronutrients - green
Secondary Macronutrients - brown
Micronutrients - yellow

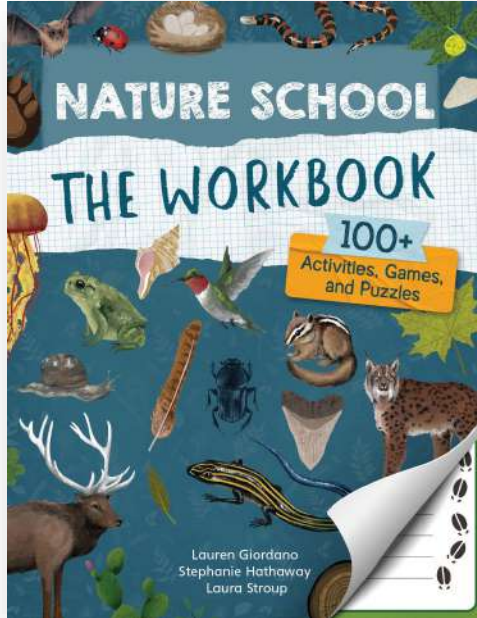

NON-RENEWABLE NUTRIENTS			PRIMARY MACRONUTRIENTS		SECONDARY MACRONUTRIENTS		MICRONUTRIENTS
1 C CARBON NITROGEN	2 N NITROGEN	3 Mg MAGNESIUM	4 B BORON	5 Fe IRON	6 Ni NICKEL	7 H HYDROGEN	8 K POTASSIUM	9 Ca CALCIUM	10 Cl CHLORINE	11 Mn MANGANESE	12 Zn ZINC
13 O OXYGEN	14 P PHOSPHORUS	15 S SULFUR	16 Cu COPPER	17 Mo MOLYBDENUM

Did You Know?
Of the nutrients essential to plants, most of them come from the soil. Only carbon, hydrogen, and oxygen come from air and water!

Challenge! Fill in the blanks using the terms from the word bank to learn more about essential nutrients.

secondary large soil smaller

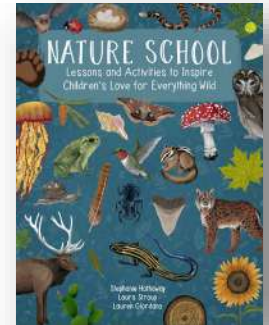

Macronutrients are those that plants need in _____ amounts. Micronutrients, while still essential for plants, are required in _____ amounts. Primary macronutrients in the soil include nitrogen, potassium, and phosphorus. _____ soil macronutrients include magnesium, calcium, and sulfur. Micronutrients taken up by plants from the _____ include the elements boron, chlorine, copper, iron, manganese, molybdenum, nickel, and zinc.
